

Sean Lydon

Field Maintenance Baseball/Softball

In depth talk about everyday field maintenance and major repairs. How to limit big ticket repairs with every day maintenance techniques, tips and tricks. Points of discussion: Mound/bullpen construction and maintenance, Lip/edge maintenance and repair, Infield maintenance and laser grading. Things to budget year to year for, and maintenance programs specific to your fields.

Turf Management Top Dressing Program

In depth talk about turf management through a topdressing program that is specific and unique to your fields. Conversation about the different sand specs available and compost/organic variations that can be added. The best time of year to top dress and a short discussion on over seeding.

BIOGRAPHY

Sean Lydon – All-American Sports Material

Sean has been around baseball and soccer fields his whole life. Sean grew up in Northern Colorado but has been all over the mid-west and east coast. He played college baseball in North Carolina and minor league baseball in Kentucky, he spent 5 years in Western Kansas coaching Junior College Baseball as well. “Being around a field my whole life, I learned quickly the ins and outs to field maintenance. Trial and error was the most common way of learning but it was also the best. Any college baseball player would agree that you spend a lot of time on the field not only playing, but working. When I became a coach, I realized how lucky I was to have free labor in the players. With always being a tight budget, we had to figure things out ourselves and make things work that weren’t the best.” This is what intrigued Sean about a possible career in the Athletic Field industry. While coaching in Kansas, Sean found All-American Sports Material and absolutely loved their product. Later on he would go on and work for All-American Sports Material in a sales and service roll. Sean has helped grow the company’s customer base with his contacts in the baseball world and has established All-American’s service/installation division. They started out with simply building baseball mounds to promote their sports clay and now they have tacked on a number of diverse services. Currently, Sean oversees the following services for All-American Sports Materials: Mound Construction/Maintenance, Aeration and Top Dressing, Laser Grading and Lip Repairs, and is establishing yearly maintenance programs with customers to minimize big ticket renovations.